

Payment Requests

Summary

Regardless of dollar value, a Payment Request form is used for certain types of commodities for which a formal purchase order is not required or where negotiation by Purchasing Services adds no value. Generally speaking, these payments encompass small, one time and non-contractual orders.

The Payment Request Usages List specifically identifies specific commodities for which a Payment Request form may be used. Commodities not identified on this Usages List must be processed via a Purchase Requisition, P-Card, or Travel Expense Report in accordance with set policy.

Note: When accepted by the payee, a P-Card should be used in lieu of a Payment Request form.

Supporting Documentation

All payment requests will require supporting documentation to substantiate and validate the requested payment. This is generally a copy of the invoice. There may be instances where a formal invoice is not available, such as with DMV payments, seminar registrations, online purchases, etc. In these cases, copies of order forms, registration documents, receipts, or other documents outlining the payee, the amount to be paid and the product or service being purchased is required.

In the case of payments from internal sources to external payees, such as liens, taxes, settlements, tuition reimbursement, etc. the requestor must provide internal documentation to substantiate the payment. This is required to satisfy audit standards.

Confidential Payments

In the case of confidential payments, the requestor is not required to submit supporting documents. They must, however, retain such supporting documentation in their own files for audit purposes. Confidential payments are rare and should be submitted directly to the Associate Director of Payment Services for handling.

Tax Reporting Regulations

The IRS requires the Institute to report certain payments made to individuals and/or organizations other than corporations, governmental agencies, and tax-exempt organizations such as colleges, and universities. Whether a payment is reportable on depends upon the payment amount, payment type and the supplier's business entity type.

An information return is required if the total payments made to a supplier within the calendar year are equal to or greater than $600 for domestic payees. Foreign nationals and foreign entities may require backup withholding regardless of dollar amount paid. Royalty payments have a lower reporting threshold of $10. Tracking of payments to each payee made throughout the year is essential if the Institute is to remain in compliance with IRS reporting regulations.

In addition to Federal Tax Reporting, some instances require specific California Backup withholding. All payments are analyzed to ensure the proper tax withholding when required California State Law.

Payees Subject to Tax Reporting

In accordance with the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), tax reportable payments must be completed through proper channels and tracked in order for federally mandated tax reporting at the end of the calendar year. The following are examples of payment types which are reportable under IRS regulations:

- Artist and other performance fees
- Consulting and other professional services (e.g., accounting and legal services)
- Foreign Nationals and Foreign Entities
- Gross proceeds paid to an attorney or law firm (regardless of whether or not they are incorporated)
- Guest speaker fees
- Honoraria
- Human subject participation
- Living and housing allowance
- Medical/healthcare and legal services (regardless of whether or not the entity is incorporated)
- Payments to individuals or sole proprietors
- Prizes and awards

- Rent or lease (real property, equipment, buildings and housing, etc.)
- Royalties (copyright, patent, intellectual property, etc.)
- Other income payments (fishing boat proceeds, crop insurance proceeds, excess golden parachute payments, etc.)

Tax Reporting – The Middleman Regulation

A 1099M, 1042S or 592B return (also known as an “informational tax return”) is used to report income other than wages, salaries and tips. Generally, the entity paying is responsible for issuing this tax reporting document. If the funds are paid to an intermediary, such as a broker or agent, it is this middleman who must issue the form. There are more than a dozen tax reporting forms, each designed for a different type and source of income.

Employee Reimbursements - Avoiding Middleman Tax Reporting

Employees may be reimbursed for properly substantiated business expenses, however, it is recommended that employees do not use personal funds and seek reimbursement for any payment that may be tax reportable. When an employee is reimbursed for payments made to a supplier who is tax reportable, the employee becomes a middleman in the payment process. In this instance the Institute may be obligated to report the payment made to the IRS, placing the employee into a middleman or “intermediary payer” situation. The middleman (the employee) would then be obligated to issue and send a subsequent tax form to the supplier.

In order to avoid this “middleman” situation, employees are discouraged from paying reportable suppliers directly. The employee should submit the supplier invoice to Payment Services via a Payment Request form so that the Institute can pay the supplier directly. (Note that the payment must be in compliance with set procedure and listed on the Payment Usages List). The Institute becomes responsible for tax reporting, thus eliminating the “intermediary payer” situation.

Using your P-Card for Tax Reportable Payments

Under updated Federal regulations, employees may pay tax reportable suppliers using their P-Card. The bank administrating the P-Card account is responsible for managing reportable payments made to payees. Employees are encouraged to use their P-Card for any payment that does not require a Purchase Order.

Taxable vs. Non Taxable Income

The Institute will not segregate “taxable” versus “non-taxable” payments made to a payee. Simply put, the Institute is not in a position to determine the taxability or what constitutes “income” to each payee. Each individual payee may have different personal tax obligations. The Institute cannot make decisions as to what is, or is not, taxable to a payee. The Institute’s obligation is to report the total dollars paid within a calendar year to suppliers and individuals who are deemed reportable under IRS regulations.

The payee is responsible for their own record keeping related to expenses and income. The portion of the reported amounts may or may not be “taxable” to them.

California Institute of Technology is precluded from offering tax or legal advice. Vendors, suppliers and individuals should consult their own tax accountant or the Internal Revenue Service as to their particular tax consequences and reporting obligations.
